PRICE THREE CENTS

36 BUSES AND 2 BUGGIES TO BE USED BY PUPILS

County School Superintendent Sets Dates for Inspection.

RIGID FEATURES ARE SPECIFIED

Letters were mailed from the office of the county superintendent of schools at the court house this morning to secretaries of school boards in the county and to drivers of 36 school buses and two buggies to present for inspection the vehicles that are to be used in the transportation of several hundreds of Adams county school children during the coming school term.

At least two children who attend classes in rural schools in Adams county won't ride to school during the coming year in the luxury of a heated, ventilated, well-lighted and upholstered school bus, but will travel to their classes in the old fashioned horse and buggy.

There are two buggies, each drawn by one horse, to be used to carry pupils to school in Union township. Each horse and buggy will transport one pupil. In addition to these two conveyances there will be one school bus in use in that township conveying 12 children to and from the classrooms.

A rigid set of specifications has been prepared for school buses and it was stated today at the local office of the state highway patrol that the two buggies will not slip by without inspection. They must be safe and comfortable and must carry blankets. The seats must be satisfactory.

The annual inspection of the vehicles to be used for the transportation of school children in the county is to be conducted at the local substation of the highway patrol on 10th avenue; at the Biglerville high school, and at the New Oxford high school building next Monday and Tuesday, August 24 and 25.

The following schedule has been announced by Professor J. Floyd Slaybaugh, county superintendent of schools, and will be carried out with Sergeant S. Sheaffer of the local substation in charge.

Monday, August 24, at the highway patrol substation here, Franklin township's nine buses at 8 o'clock in the morning; three from Hamilton township at 9 o'clock; (Continued on Page Two)

CAR TURNS OVER TWICE INJURING ONE; TRUCK HIT

Driver Loses Control As He Passes Auto Near York Springs.

TRUCKER HALTED TO GIVE TWO LIFT

One person was injured and three motor vehicles were damaged in two automobile accidents in the county, Saturday. Highway patrolmen from the local substation investigated the mishaps, but have laid no charges.

Kenneth Reeve, 26, East Berlin R. 2, a passenger in an automobile driven by Reuben Sipe, 20, Hampton, received a possible fracture of the skull, lacerations of the head and face, and suffered from shock in a crash, three miles east of York Springs on the Hanover-Carlisle road at 11:45 o'clock Saturday night, day night.

Sipe told Patrolman R. E. Mathers, of the local substation, that he had been driving toward York Springs at a speed of about 40 miles an hour when he passed another car traveling in the same direction after he had ascertained that there were no cars coming in the opposite direction.

Car Overtakes Twice

The Hampton man said that he had passed the other car, but in driving back to the right side of the road he ran off the hard-surfaced section and then swerved sharply to the left to avoid going into the ditch at the side of the road. As he swerved the car upset and rolled over twice, crushing the top of the machine and badly damaging other parts of the automobile.

Reeve is reported to have been thrown through the roof of the vehicle as it rolled over. He was taken to the Hanover hospital, where he was admitted as a patient.

Mildred V. Chronister, York Springs R. 2, gave the investigating officer a similar account of the accident. She had been driving the automobile that Sipe passed before overturning. Patrolman Mathers expressed the opinion that Sipe had lost control of his machine as he tried to return to the right side of the road.

Hits Rear of Truck

None was injured, but two vehicles damaged in an accident 300 feet west of the McSherrytown borough line on the Bonneauville road, shortly before noon, Saturday. Sergeant S. Sheaffer, of the local substation, investigated.

When D. M. Sheely, 62, McKnightstown R. 1, is reported to have stopped his truck suddenly to pick up several hitch-hikers who he told the patrolman he thought he knew, the rear of his truck was struck by a car driven by Lester Emmert, 18, 20 Linden street, Hanover.

The truck was only slightly damaged, while the front of the Emmert car was more seriously battered.

Emmert said that he had been driving west at a speed of about 20 miles an hour, but had been unable to stop when the speed of the truck ahead was suddenly checked.

COMMITTEEMEN HEAR SPEAKERS

Republican Meeting Held in Gettysburg Headquarters Saturday Evening.

The Adams county republican committee adopted resolutions "heartily and unequivocally endorsing the platform of the republican party as providing the program necessary to restore the confidence of our people in the stability of our government," heard addresses by candidates and guest speakers and then unanimously approved a demand by the county chairman for the resignation of committeemen who "will not give complete support to the entire ticket" at their first campaign meeting Saturday evening at party headquarters in the Citizens trust company building, Baltimore street.

The meeting was called to order by County Chairman G. R. Thompson about 8:30 o'clock. Secretary John H. Basehore conducted the roll call which revealed 82 committeemen in attendance from 35 of the 42 districts in the county.

4 Resolutions Adopted

The secretary then read four resolutions which were promptly adopted by unanimous vote. The measures held the policies of the present administration to be "as far afield from the long recognized and established principles of the democratic party as they are different from those of the republican party" and "earnestly invited dissatisfied members of the democratic party to join us in compelling a return to a governmental program which accords with the sound traditions of both major parties."

Hogshead, who said she is employed at the United States Veterans' administration facility, Knoxville, Iowa, reported that a $30 wrist watch had been stolen from her after she arrived at the inn on a Pittsburgh bus bound for New York city.

She told Trooper John L. Hochreiter who investigated that she had placed the watch on a wash stand and then had gone to the restaurant, forgetting the watch. Discovering that she had left the watch behind, she returned to the wash room in about 10 minutes, but the watch was gone.

The bus passengers submitted to search by Trooper Hochreiter but the watch was not recovered.

FOUR MOTORISTS HURT AS AUTOS HIT NEAR TOWN

Injuries Are Not Serious; Crash Occurs On Keckler's Hill.

LOCAL PHYSICIAN GIVES TREATMENT

Four persons were injured, none seriously, when cars driven by Fred J. Myers, 24, Waverly, New York, and Elmer F. Bream, 72, Aspers, R. 1, collided this morning about 10:15 o'clock on the crest of Keckler's hill, three miles north of here on the Biglerville road. Three of the persons were treated at the office of Dr. R. W. Gifford, Baltimore street. The fourth person did not require medical treatment.

Corporal J. G. Warren of the local substation of the highway patrol learned in the course of his investigation of the accident that Myers had been driving toward Gettysburg and Bream in the opposite direction when the accident occurred.

The patrolman stated that Bream had admitted taking his eyes off the roadway for a few moments as he looked to the left toward a fruit stand at the side of the road. As he looked to the left, his car bore across the center of the highway into the path of the New York machine. Myers turned his car to the right to avoid a collision but the left front sections of the two cars struck.

John B. Whiteley, Elmira, New York, a passenger in the Myers machine, received bruises of the chest and possible fractures of several ribs and his wife received bruises of the left shin. Myers, the driver, suffered an abrasion on the top of his head and Mrs. Myers was cut on the left hand and the lip. She also received abrasions and lacerations of the shins.

The injured persons were brought to Gettysburg by Benton Waller, Baltimore street. With the exception of Myers, they were treated by Doctor Gifford.

Both automobiles had to be towed from the scene of the crash. It was estimated that the two cars were damaged to the extent of about $150.

REPORTS THEFT OF $40

Russell Koonz, who resides three miles from Gettysburg along the Littlestown road, reported to the local substation of the state police that while he was in Gettysburg from 8 o'clock until midnight Saturday night, his home was entered and $40 stolen from a small stand on the second floor. The theft was discovered upon his return. Trooper John L. Hochreiter is conducting an investigation.

REPORTS ATTACK BY POLICE DOG

Mrs. Beulah Buohl Receives Treatment for Arm Injured on Saturday.

Mrs. Beulah Buohl, wife of George W. Buohl, Buford avenue, was treated at the Annie M. Warner hospital Saturday evening for a badly torn left arm near the elbow. Mrs. Buohl reported that she was hurt when attacked by a large police dog as she walked alone on Buford avenue about 9:30 o'clock Saturday evening on her way to the grocery store.

Mrs. Buohl said that she had passed the home of Mrs. Carrie Pretz, along the north side of the street, and was walking east along the lot used by Bream and Plank to display used cars when the dog leaped over the hedge on the Pretz property and attacked her.

Fastening its teeth in her arm, the dog is reported to have held on while Mrs. Buohl attempted to free herself. As she struggled she fell between two parked cars. She believes that the fall broke the dog's hold. Employees from the garage had arrived by that time and came to the woman's assistance.

An employee at the garage took Mrs. Buohl to the office of Dr. C. G. Crist, Chambersburg street, where she was treated. Later in the evening she went to the Annie M. Warner hospital and received anti-toxin. This morning she returned to have the injury dressed.

SUSPEND OWENS FOR NOT MAKING TRIP WITH TEAM

A. A. U. Officials Disbar Negro After He Cancels Sweden Races.

Berlin, Aug. 17 (AP).—Charged with taking an unauthorized "run out" on a scheduled trip to Sweden with a team of American track and field stars, Jesse Owens, Ohio State's negro triple Olympic winner, was suspended Sunday by the Amateur Athletic Union.

At the same time there were indications that the negro, with the approval of his coach, Larry Snyder, already had decided to turn professional and was returning home suddenly for the specific purpose of considering commercial inducements.

American officials, including Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, and Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, took prompt action at a conference held in the Olympic stadium after learning that Owens and Snyder suddenly had canceled reservations for flying to Stockholm with the squad which left London Sunday morning.

Refuse to Change Minds

Owens and his coach arranged, instead, to sail for home on the Queen Mary Wednesday. Ferris telephoned to Snyder, advising him of the decision disbaring the outstanding Olympic winner after failing to persuade them to change their minds and go through with an agreement to participate in a series of six meets in Sweden and Norway.

Snyder told Ferris that offers whereby Owens can capitalize on his Olympic conquests now were so attractive that it was necessary to return home without delay "to strike while the iron is hot."

Snyder did not reveal the details which had developed regarding Owens' commercial prospects since one offer was received here involving $25,000 for a West Coast orchestra tour, but he told Ferris:

"Jesse has a change to make more money now that he may earn the rest of his life through ordinary channels. I am sorry that he will be unable to go through with the remainder of the European tour but I cannot conscientiously advise Owens not to seize what may be the chance of his lifetime."

Promise Made to Sweden

The A. A. U., nevertheless, felt it had been left "holding the bag," besides being placed in an embarrassing position with Sweden, which had been assured that Owens would be included on the touring team.

Officials were further irked because Snyder, who they said had consented to all the arrangements, also had agreed to manage the team's tour, lasting two weeks.

Glenn Cunningham, 1,500-meter star, took general charge of the squad, which left without Owens but included such stars as Forrest Towns, Don Lash, Dave Albritton, Earle Meadows, Ken Carpenter, Glenn Morris and Harold Cagle. Archie Williams was to join the team later.

GIRL, 16, CUT IN CAR CRASH

Miss Mae Baumgardner, Bendersville, Receives Treatment Here.

Miss Mae Baumgardner, 16, Bendersville, received lacerations of the face and head in an automobile collision near the intersection of Lincoln avenue and Carlisle street, Saturday evening. The force of the impact forced Miss Baumgardner's head through the windshield of the car of Sidney C. Taylor, Biglerville R. 2, in which she was riding.

The Taylor car struck the rear of the automobile of Dr. R. McDowell, Keedysville, Maryland, when the latter stopped after he had discovered his mistake in driving past Lincoln avenue, enroute to Harrisburg. Taylor told Officer Chester M. Spence of the borough police that a part had dropped from his windshield wiper to the floor of the car and that he was stopping about for that when the crash occurred.

Persons living near the scene of the accident took Miss Baumgardner to the Annie M. Warner hospital where her injuries were treated. Damage to the two cars amounted to about $90.

Warren returned to duty Sunday at the local substitution of the state highway patrol after completing a three-week "refresher" training course at the highway patrol school at Harrisburg, a course similar to that taken by Sergeant S. COMMITTEEMEN HEAR SPEAKERS

tempts to centralize government, to change radically the basic foundations of our governmental structure, to stir up class feeling and to cultivate disrespect for the judiciary of the United States.

Robert E. Tipton, Gettysburg, nominee for representative in the general assembly, was the first speaker to be called upon. In a brief talk he promised to work for the people of this county and for the "good of the state at large," if elected.

John R. Jackson, Esq., Waynesboro, nominee for the state senate from the Adams-Franklin district, scored "the unpatriotic and unethical methods that are being used to drive voters to the support of the administration" but saw "as a hopeful sign indications that dissenting democrats will help put the republican ticket across."

"Many dissatisfied democrats are saying more scathing things about the administrations at Washington and Harrisburg than are the republicans, themselves," Jackson continued. He called for a "new birth in patriotism in this campaign which is not a personal matter but one of principle — constitutional government against the communistic new deal regime at Washington."

The third candidate to speak was Dr. Frank S. Magill, Chambersburg, nominee for congress from the York-Adams-Franklin district. He urged "a desperate attempt to prevent four more years of the present administration at Washington and two more at Harrisburg" which he predicted "would completely undermine the whole morale of the American people." He read statistics concerning the operations of the "alphabetical agencies" of the administration and came to the conclusion that "the great economists in Washington don't know ABC about practical economics."

Ralph Umstead, Philadelphia, discussed the purposes of the "dollar certificate campaign" and then described the current campaign as a continuation of the "century-old struggle of the Saxon race against dictatorship and for personal independence and security." He warned that "there may be no more elections if the democrats win this time for they will gain control of the supreme court and then have all branches of the government in their power."

Chairman Thompson announced arrangements for the ox roast and rally at the South Mountain fair grounds, Saturday, August 29, when party candidates and guest speakers will speak.

Want "Violent" Action

(Copyright 1936 By Associated Press)

Madrid, Aug. 17.—Spain's government, stumbling into the closing days of a month of civil war beset both by armed fascist siege and by rising communis clamor for a "baby Russia," announced Sunday night the seizure of a vast store of clerical wealth.

"Russia chical" is the slogan of powerful communist elements, now clamoring with discontent over the administration's slow conduct of the civil war.

Ever since the outbreak of the rebellion caused the then premier, Santiago Casares Quiroga, perspiring and desperate, to hand out arms to anyone who would take them, the communists have been urged by anarchist gunmen to seize complete power in Madrid.

HIS BRAKES AND STEERING GEAR WERE SAFE...

...too bad his tires weren't!

HE HAD a blow-out. His car was thrown out of control in spite of the fact that his brakes and steering gear were in perfect shape. Things might have been different, though, had his tires been able to stand up under today's high speeds.

Take our tip. Don't you gamble on tires. Get a set of Goodrich Safety Silvertowns. Then you'll have the protection of the Life-Saver Golden Ply, a layer of special rubber and full-floating cords scientifically treated to resist the blowout-causing heat generated inside all tires by today's high speeds. By resisting this heat the Golden Ply keeps rubber and fabric from separating. It keeps blisters from forming. And when you prevent the blister you prevent the high-speed blow-out.

DINNER for

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: Carol's year of teaching school at Ashboro is finished. It means, actually, success as a teacher, and failure in the two acute situations which engaged her emotions. Now she is determined to try Atlanta, and that in spite of the fact that the nearest she has to a "contact" likely to produce a job is Blake Thornton. Blake was her partner at a dinner in Ashboro, and he was impressed with her. Whatever happens, Carol has determined to teach no longer.

Chapter 21

FIRST EFFORT

OR Carol said: "2250 Elmwood Road," to the taxi driver, and sat back against the worn leather seat. The taxi lunged noisily ahead.

The address belonged, temporarily at least, to Margery Craig, who had been Carol's roommate at college. Margery's husband was in the real estate business, so she never lived anywhere very long. She moved in to a vacant house and fixed it up as best she could, to improve its rental or sale value, and then Harry Craig immediately began bringing prospects to inspect it.

2250 Elmwood proved to be a trite house of tapestry brick with depressed-looking shrubbery and one emaciated pine to ward off the Georgia sun. The driver carried her bag to the porch, and Margery appeared before the bell could ring.

"Carol! I'm so glad to see you. Let me carry that. . ."

Carol kissed her. "It's not heavy. Margery, it's swell to see you."

They went inside, and deposited the suitcase in the guest room. Margery sat on the bed and smiled. "You look like a million dollars."

Carol smiled back, and took off her hat. "So do you."

That was painfully untrue. Margery Howell had been tiny and blonde, with peach-blossom coloring and cameo features. Margery Craig was too thin, and her fire was gone. Two children and six moves in the past four years, together with a husband in real estate, had been too much for her. She sighed.

"I feel like I look a thousand."

They went into the living-room and sat down. "I'm sorry I couldn't meet you," Margery apologized, "but we've only got a company car and Harry had an engagement."

"I wouldn't have let you. Coming in at the suburban station made it just a step, anyhow."

There was an awkward silence. I've lost contact with her, Carol realized sadly, and thought of the years they had been inseparable. Carol lit a cigaret and said with metallic brightness:

"Where are the children? I've never even seen the baby."

Margery's face came alive. "Little Harry's out with the maid, and the baby's having her nap. It's almost time for her to wake up. Tell me about what you've been doing and what you're going to do."

Carol told her briefly, and added: "As for what I'm going to do—Lord knows. I'm starting the hunt in the morning. If I'm lucky enough to find anything I'll begin whenever they say. What I'd like to do is find somebody that wants to hire me a month from now; then I can go on over to Meredith and spend a month with the family."

Margery was determinedly interested, but Carol sensed that an unattached woman in search of a job was something too remote from her present existence to seem very real. The humor of it struck her forcibly. She said with the same artificial brightness:

"Tell me about the rest of the girls. I haven't heard from any of 'em in ages. How's Louise?"

Margery's eyes clouded. "She's getting a divorce. Kenneth drinks like a fish, but I think it's as much her fault as his. And Cornelia's got a grand job (she's not married, you know) with Millbank's. She's a buyer in the ready-to-wear department."

Carol made a mental note to look up Cornelia. It sounded as if she and Cornelia might succeed in resuming the intimacy of six years ago.

They went doggedly through the roster of mutual acquaintances. When the list was complete Carol said:

"By the way, do you know a man named Thornton? Blake Thornton?"

Margery nodded. "Yes. At least I know who he is. Harry knows him, and I've seen his wife at parties. Why?"

"I met him in Ashboro, and when he found I was hunting a job he suggested that I look him up. Not that that means anything." She hesitated, cumulated to curiosity and asked: "What's his wife like?"

Margery hesitated, and Carol wanted to smile. Margery, in college, had been famous for her tact.

"She seemed very nice," Margery conceded. "I think she's a lot older than Blake, and she doesn't look very strong. But I imagine she was beautiful when she was a girl."

A shrill, lusty wail assailed the silence, and Margery sprang to her feet.

"That's Dottie," she said eagerly. And added unnecessarily: "She's waked up."

Thornton & Company, the building directory said, occupied rooms 608-10-12. Promptly at half-past four Carol found the offices, and entered with some unease. Blake Thornton, for all the politeness in his voice when she telephoned, might be regretting his suggestion. The secretary took her name and disappeared, to return almost immediately.

"Mr. Thornton will see you now, Miss Torrance."

Blake got up from his desk to shake hands. "This is fine," he smiled. "Take that chair."

She sat down, and wished suddenly that she hadn't come. It seemed rather unporting to grasp at a casual offer made during a social evening.

"How's Ashboro?" he asked. "And all the Tylers?"

"Fine. Ben and Andy both sent their best, and said you were to come down and go fishing whenever you could get away."

She felt more uncomfortable and unnecessary than ever, as if her very presence said to him: Well, here I am. What are you going to do about me?

"Nice of them." He was talking about the Tylers, she remembered with an effort. "I wish I could take 'em up on it."

Silence clogged their talk. A tentative breeze drifted through the windows, and noises boiled up faintly from the pavement below: brakes, screaming at traffic, newsboys screaming the afternoon papers. He said finally:

"What about the job? Anything promising so far?"

"Not very. I went to see the friend in placement work, and put my name in the pot. She thinks there's sure to be something in the fall, but that's a long way off."

"You don't want to take the summer off? A city's like the suburbs of hell in July and August."

She smiled. "You forget I've got to start working towards a farm for my old age. I'd like to have three or four weeks at home, of course, but even that's not essential."

To her surprise he was nodding agreement. "I hadn't forgotten. I was just trying to find out how badly you wanted it." He leaned forward in his chair, and his manner became almost brusque.

"What I had in mind would be an experiment, of course, and if it didn't work I'd have to fire you."

"Naturally," she said quickly. "I'm not that dumb."

"Our business," he disregarded her comment, "is the only one in this section of the South, so far as I know. We do newspaper advertising of all sorts: some stuff that we syndicate and sell over and over, throughout the country. In good times we had two regular copy men on the staff, but for the last two years I've written as much of it as I had time for, and the rest I've turned over to free-lances." He stared speculatively at her. "I was wondering what sort of copy you'd write. . ."

She looked back at him, and tried not to be too eager. "I haven't the faintest idea, but I'd like very much to have a shot at it."

The room was quiet again. Blake Thornton was openly appraising her, with eyes as cold as slate, and she sat still and waited for the verdict.

"We might try it and see," he said thoughtfully. "I've got an idea that a brand new slant might make valuable copy, once you had the hang of it. You wouldn't be saturated with all the stock phrases and clichés."

She felt the lifting of a physical weight from her shoulders, and the resultant lightness made her want to spring from her chair. The image of his astonishment restrained her.

"The salary wouldn't be big to start with," he was saying: "say a hundred a month. Of course we spend several times that on copy some months, and if you get the hang of it and can turn it out fairly rapidly, we'll pay you a good deal more."

Carol had smiled suddenly. "When do I start?"

He considered again. "You said something about a month at home. What about July first?"

"That would suit me perfectly." "Summer would be a good time for you to start in, I expect."

Carol is driven home, tomorrow, by her new boss.

George expressed the hope that the new trees may be obtained through the state, and the planting done as a WPA project, thus bringing little expense to the borough.

Soft Beds.—Children and youth tend to induce consumption.

The "Adams Rifles" and the "Independent Blues" had their picnic on Saturday, at Elizer's Spring, between Oxford and Hanover. They had quite an agreeable day. On their way down they marched across to the Pine church, to attend the funeral of Capt. Myers—afterwards returning to the Spring.

Death of Capt. H. Gates Myers:

This upright, honorable officer has "gone to his long home." He commanded the Hanover "Marion Rifles" during the three months campaign, being among the first to answer the call of his country, and volunteer for its defence. He was in good health during the encampment at York and Chambersburg, and until the army crossed the Potomac. He was seized with bilious fever at Martinsburg, and was removed to the residence of a friend near Hagerstown, where he died on Wednesday evening, aged 30 years.
He leaves an amiable wife and two interesting children. He was a son of Henry Myers, Esq., of New Chester, and a brother of H. J. Myers, cur member of the last Legislature.
He was in the mercantile business in Hanover, with Howard Myers, Esq. His remains were interred at the Pine church, near New Chester, on Saturday, with military honors. The military was under the command of Gen. Hay, of York.

torney General and Secretary of sumed the practice of law, and located himself in our neighboring town of York.

The Baltimore Police Commissioners have been taken on to New York, and are now lodged in Port

Thoman, of this place, aged 64 years.

HE FORGOT TO REGISTER

He kicked about the taxes and he jeered at men in power.

He called the politicians thieves and crooks;

On government theories he'd argue by the hour

And he got his economics from the books.

He didn't like the president; he didn't like the Mayor.

In every leader's eye he saw the mole.

"It is time we changed the system,"
he would frequently declare,
But he forgot to register to vote.

"We should throw 'em out of office!" was the burden of his cry.

"That gang is but a crowd of racketeers!

They're squandering our money till the debts are mountain high And our children will be paying them for years."

He'd get you in a corner and he'd whimper all night long.

He repeated every rumor that's afloat.

He was very glib at telling everybody what was wrong.

But he forgot to register to vote.

I have patience with the grumbler who can justify his whine.

To an earnest man I'll lend a willing ear.

Twist right and wrong not always can we truly draw the line;

But that much could be improved is very clear.

Still whatever be their politics, all citizens agree

On this most important matter which I note:

That no man should ever grumble at his government if he Will not qualify him to cast a vote.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

WALKING, around in the world is like living in a great library. In no matter what direction you reach, you draw out a book with something new and instructive within it. Thus with this wonderful universe.

Go out into the night and view the heavens. The most efficient corporation that ever has been created cannot compete with the system and regular timing of each one of the stars and planets. Year in and year out there is order and precision to every movement up there. How little we know about it, however. If a man could write the life history of but a single star he would exhaust the material thousands of times that men have gathered through the ages about any one star.

What do we know of the earth? Comparatively little. Fabre wrote books about insects—devoted a lifetime to their study—and only skimmed the surface of all to be learned. Yet he opened one of the most fascinating studies in existence. The history of a swarm of bees would astound the one who had never heard of a bee.

I recently took a brief sea trip. I went out on deck one evening and sat and thought. How full of mystery this mammoth body of water. Prof.
Beebe has given us knowledge about water life that fairly makes one gasp with wonder. I walked along the shore of my island home and plucked wild flowers last evening. I found a cluster of tiny purple flowers that looked like miniature orchids. I asked them how they happen way out here in such a secluded spot, but I got only silence and fragrance for an answer!

Oh, what a world! How much to learn. How inspiring the little that we have learned. What a text-book is this universe of ours.

Nature, at times slays ruthlessly, yet at other times it creates extraordinary. There is such a balance to everything in nature, however. Mere man could never work things out so well. "Only God can make a tree," wrote Joyce Kilmer.

The shame of our present civilization is that any one human being should be neglected and unhappy in a world so saturated with beauty and wonder.

Heirs to Receive Treasure Hoard Concealed in Woman's Clothing

Nurse and Relatives Discover $40,000 in Cash Secreted
In Wearing Apparel, Handbags and Shoebox
In Nebraska Farm Home.

Royal, Neb., Aug. 17 (AP).—A treasure hoard found hidden in clothing, handbags and shoe boxes in the home of the late Mrs. Josie Hackett promised unexpected wealth Sunday to the widow's thirty-three known heirs.

The fortune—$40,000 in cash and bonds—was safe in a bank, deposited by court order after a nurse uncovered its secret hiding place.

Mrs. Floyd Cole, of Royal, who cared for Mrs. Hackett, 80, during her last illness, found $20,000 in cash and bonds in a shoe box wrapped in paper and hidden in a bureau drawer.

That was before Mrs. Hackett died, three weeks ago.

Mrs. Cole kept the discovery secret because she said she feared a robbery, but after the widow's death she told relatives, who vainly searched the home for a will. In looking they found money stuffed in purses, handbags and clothing about the house.

County Judge J. Q. Ingram took charge of the money and deposited it in a Neligh (Nebraska) bank in the name of the estate pending appointment of an administrator.

Three pieces of farm land totaling approximately 400 acres comprise the remainder of the estate, valued at an estimated $90,000.

Most of the property was inherited from Mrs. Hackett's father, James M. Gillespie, who died in 1901. She cared for her father from 1882 until his death and lived fifty-four years on the homestead, where she died.
She was a widow and had no children.

Antelope county residents near Royal recalled the elder Gillespie as a "smart, thrifty farmer." James Gillespie, a cousin of Mrs. Hackett, said his uncle speculated "occasionally."

James said he was surprised by discovery of the fortune, but added he did not "expect any court fight" among the heirs.

20% Boost in Cost Of Food Foreseen

Army Quartermasters, Buying for CCC Camps, Predict Increase By Spring.

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Contemplating the millions of dollars' worth of food they'll buy for the Civilian Conservation corps during the next few months, army quartermasters predicted Sunday that prices would go up twenty per cent by next spring.

The average family, they argued, likewise would feel the increase because of the rise in food prices.

It was the first bombardment of French soil during the frontier warfare, but caused little surprise among border observers, since the Spaniards have been fighting within rifle shot of the international line.

Earlier, other rebel bombing planes wrecked huge gasoline tanks at Bilbao, which the government had guarded successfully against sea attack with a living wall of rebel prisoners.

Off San Sebastian, three rebel cruisers threatened to shell fortified heights near the city.

After the bombs had hit Biriatou, French authorities went to the little village, a mile from Hendaye. Later reporting that the cafe was the only building damaged.

ing the demand for high quality groceries—so far have been only partially felt because the CCC's non-perishable foods are contracted for three months in advance.

Increased prices for milk and other dairy products, fresh meat and vegetables, however, already have boosted the daily cost of feeding one CCC recruit from 44.0-cents in April to 45.39 cents in July, the commissary experts said. Scanning latest market reports, officials predicted that before new crops replenish the supply, the ration cost next spring would reach a high of 55 cents.

Butler, Pa. (AP)—Judge John E. Wilson told Mrs. Clarence Walter Hoover it might be a good idea to hit her husband with the piano leg she testified he ripped from the instrument. "I have," she said. "Yes," the judge pointed out, "but you missed him." He ordered Hoover to pay costs in the surety of the peace suit and sent the couple back to their Portersville home.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

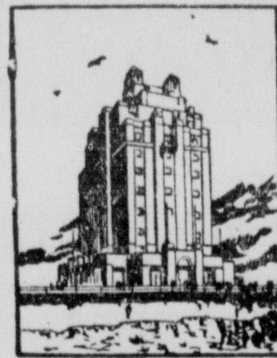

New York.—Gladys Loyd, who is Mrs. Edward G. Robinson in real life, was a business manager for several famous authors long before fame rewarded the Robinson histrionics. As a matter of fact, he wasn't well known at all until he impersonated Al Capone in a play about six years ago. After that "tough" assignments came readily and eventually the movies got him. Now rapidly nearing the "millionaire" class, he ascribes his success to the "menace" in his face. But, the financial sagacity of his wife hasn't exactly been a hindrance.

Standing on Broadway at 47th street the other night, minding my own business, I was pleasantly startled to observe the youngest of the Bennett sisters, Joan, go by. The pretty, honey-haired thing was just off the boat (the Queen Mary, no less) and she was wearing a lovely gown of some unknown (to me) design. But the soft blue of it chimed in so prettily with her hair and eyes that you thought for a moment you must be witnessing a scene from a movie. Ladies and gentlemen, Miss Bennett has never appeared lovelier in any picture than she is in real life.

Now is the time of year when the river police are on the alert for "pirates" in distress. These are the kids who, imbued with the spirit of Captain Kidd, Jean Lafitte and other corsairs, build themselves rafts or boats and go adventuring on the nearby waters. The danger is that these rafts are seldom substantially built and almost never expertly manner. Caught by the dangerous currents of Hell Gate, there is apt to be a tragedy unless the police, who use fast small motor boats, are able to reach them in time. It's exciting business—this being a pirate—but it's more exciting if the river the police. Usually they are affable fellows with an easy approach, a friendly line of chatter, and an infectious personality. You know, a friendly chat on deck, a drink at the bar...

Another of those socially-minded matrons who thrills to the presence of celebrities at her parties, made the error of inviting two song-writers recently. They went well armed. When the request came, as they knew it would, for a display of their talent, they agreed with enthusiasm and immediately sang a song which
